Sailing the Chesapeake Bay and Beyond: Adding Purpose to Adventure

By Jordan Snyder

Tuesday June 21st at 8pm

Community Room, Five Star Residence

Jordan's presentation will detail his sailing adventures on the Chesapeake Bay, Atlantic Ocean and Sea of Cortez. He will also spend a few minutes discussing the issues of microplastics on our waterways.

The Chesapeake Bay, right in our backyard, is the largest estuary in the United States. Wonderful wildlife, beautiful sunrise/sunsets, and ever-changing weather makes it the perfect place for adventure photography. Having a sailboat on the Bay and a spirit for adventure, Jordan will present colorful and sometimes unorthodox photographs as he uses homemade camera mounts and other unusual equipment to shoot stunning and entertaining photos.

Recently, Jordan has added purpose to his bay and ocean adventures by working with researchers to help map invisible plastics pollution that is covering the waters of our planet. He is a member of a team of adventurers who collect water samples all over the world for laboratory analysis for plastics content.
